

Kaznacheyev D.G., Lopayeva O.M. Features of formation of psychological sustainability and readiness of police officers in the course of shooting training. In the article the authors have considered range of problems of training is from the point of view of forming of technical and tactical actions in the conditions of short space of studies or small amount of the practical firing, psychological control during the study of technique of firing that can allow to promote reliability and success with a capture and forming of technical skills maximally short space.

They described methodical recommendations in relation to the features of preparation of policemen at behavior and by a weapon to implementation of official duties in the organs of internal affairs, questions that embrace behavior of workers of police in extreme and crisis situations and factors, that she is characterized, and also ways are certain to the effective modern system of organization of preparation of policemen for implementation of official tasks in terms, that is related to risk for life and cause physiology and psychological stress.

Keywords police officers, shooting-iron, fire training, psychological state, psychological control, skill formation, aiming.