Khrystynchenko N.P. State of judicial integrity within judicial reform: analysis and monitoring .

Coverage of some features of the new judicial system to ensure justice in the country is associated with the need to ensure a sufficient level of integrity of judges to make a fair and legal judgment. A separate discussion is the analysis of the selection of judges in the context of judicial reform and the obligation to ensure that they are in line with their positions.

The scientific article deals with administrative-legal aspect of the status of a judge within the framework of the creation of a new judicial system, as a means of ensuring the administration of justice in the state. The order, and the peculiarities of administrative-legal relations that arise in the process of creating a new judicial system in relation to new requirements for appointment to a judge's position have been described.

The experience of bringing judges to justice for violation of the law has been reviewed. This topic is extremely popular as the status of a judge within the framework of establishing a new judicial system is defined as a means of ensuring the administration of justice in the state. Following the practice of the European Court of Human Rights, we note that the enforcement of judgments is considered an integral part of the trial in the sense of Article 6 of the Convention, therefore the provision of the right to a fair trial is one of the key tasks to be achieved by judicial reform.

Adoption of the Law on the Judiciary is one of the key stages in the normative support of judicial reform, which opens the way for a qualitatively new model of functioning of the judiciary in accordance with public expectations and European standards and satisfying the public request for a fair trial. Consideration is being given to the creation of a Single Judicial Information and Telecommunication System, which should ensure the exchange of documents in electronic form between courts, between the court and participants in the litigation, between the participants in the trial. It has also been established that the court will conduct a case review in electronic form with the possibility of using electronic evidence.
