

Taus M. M. Victim's consent to conclude a plea agreement as a tool to widen the scope of the institution of the agreement in criminal proceedings: certain aspects. The article deals with topical issues of criminal proceedings on the basis of the plea agreement concluded on the basis of the written consent of the victim in this criminal proceedings and identifies the main problems of the application of criminal procedural law in the execution of criminal proceedings on the basis of agreements.

The author analyzes the issue of extending the limits of application of the institute of agreements in criminal proceedings of Ukraine by applying the institute of plea agreement in criminal proceedings in which the victim participates, in particular in cases when concluding an agreement on reconciliation between the victim and the accused is not allowed.

The article analyzes the problematic issues of procedural registration of the victim's written consent for conclusion by the prosecutor of the plea agreement and further consideration of such agreement by the court. The author of the article identifies the main shortcomings and gaps of the current criminal procedural legislation, in part, which regulates the implementation of court proceedings on the basis of a plea agreement concluded with the written consent of the victim, as well as possible ways of overcoming the identified legislative problems found. agreements in criminal proceedings of Ukraine and ensuring the protection of procedural rights of participants in criminal proceedings in the implementation court proceedings based on agreements.

In particular, the author drew attention to the lack of procedural rules that should ensure the effective use of victims' procedural rights and protection of legitimate interests in court proceedings on the basis of a plea agreement. The author draws particular attention to the shortcomings of the procedural legislation, which led to the actual deprivation of the victim's right to appeal against the sentence on the basis of the plea agreement concluded with his written consent.

Keywords: criminal proceedings, agreement, plea agreement, victim, victim's written consent.