

Victor M. Pletenets. Features of preparation for searches in terms of anti-investigation. The Criminal Procedure Code of Ukraine stipulates that a search is conducted to identify and fix the information about the circumstances of the offense of criminal offenses finding tools criminal offense or property that was taken as a result of its commitment, and locating wanted persons

It is noted that scientists have identical views on the need for careful preparation to prepare for the search. Individual values to obtain a positive result if training takes counteraction to investigation.

Attention is drawn, in order to avoid possible impact on the investigation and the investigation process should minimize the amount of information coming from the investigator stakeholders that can act as participants of the proceedings and other persons, including the officials. At the same time should be hidden by an activity a criminal offense, setting orienting information about the individuals involved.

The data obtained in the first place, by examining data about a person searches, venue search and objects to be searched more.

It is emphasized that the search explores the psychological readiness to achieve, resulting in the concentration of all other feelings, focus and effectiveness of attention.

The investigator should be aware of the possibility of creating conflict situations during the search and the way in which they are resolved. The conflict can be pronounced, which complicates searches.

Therefore, the investigator's commitment to conducting searches and minimizing external disturbances are also important components in developing the confidence of the searchers in the imminence of detecting caches. The need to minimize the time required to prepare for a search is indicated. This will reduce the possibility for interested persons to obtain statements of pending investigative action. Attention is drawn to the fact that the preparation of a search is a guarantee of its effectiveness.
